1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Wong et al., patent number 5,890,175 in view of Bezos et al., patent number 6,029,141.

Wong substantially teaches an electronic commerce system at least comprising a host in communication with a plurality of distributors (col. 3, lines 35-50); the host having a capability to sort discrete items from the distributors (col. 4, lines 5-15); and a store builder (col. 3, line 60 – col. 4, line 10) including border design and store name (fig. 2, merchant store information); product mix commensurate with a specialty store (fig. 3, specialty products, fig. 4.); store builder maintains a consumer accessible website separate from the store (fig. 11) and electronic link to the store (col. 6, line 60 – col. 7, line 5). Wong also substantially teaches the method at least comprising having a store owner electronically accessing a host, select a store type, setting up an account, customizing the appearance, customizing a product mix (see at least figs. 2-5, 7-8, col. 3, lines 20-40, col. 4, lines 1-67) including border design and store name (fig. 2, merchant store information); product mix commensurate with a specialty store (fig. 3, specialty products, fig. 4.).

Bezos et al. teaches devising a commission schedule (see at least col. 2, lines 1-20, col. 7, lines 35-40) and stores providing a consumer with access to items assigned a unique tag (see at least col. 6, lines 20-25, col. 3, lines 10-25, col. 11, lines 55-65, col. 7, lines 10-15). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have used the commission and access via a distributor, to items assigned a unique tag as in Bezos in the system and method of Wong since the commission and access of Bezos would have promoted marketing of goods and exposure as taught by Bezos (col. 1, lines 25-50, col. 3, lines 25-40). It also would have been obvious to have customized the store by a combination of all the options of claim 3 since these are well known in the store building art for further distinction of store sites. It also would have been obvious to have the product mix commensurate with a key word store since this is well known in the art for customer searching and which would have been adopted for the intended use of searching the mall of Wong. It also would have been obvious to have permitted the ordering of personalized items since this is well known in the art and would have been adopted for the intended use of at least applications to clothing items (such as Land's End catalog which offers sewing of initials to items). It also would have been obvious to have a store owner own multiple stores each with a different URL since this would have been adopted for the intended use of running multiple specialty stores. It also would have been obvious to have the host not discernable by the customer since the customer interaction of Wong and Bezos is with the store (buying from the store, not the mall in general). It also would have been obvious to have deselected undesired items since this would have been adopted at least for the intended use of generating specialty stores.

3. Applicant's arguments filed on 10/21/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). As stated above, suggestion is provided in at least Bezos.

The applicant argues that the combination does not teach a class designation for identifying product items available from a plurality of distributors such that 'members of a same class are assigned a unique tag'. Upon further review of Wong, the class designation exists at least with the group ID and subgroup information such as aisle and shelf designations (col. 4, lines 5-55). Bezos further supports the class designation by providing a hyperlink for the grouping of products.

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Kvitka "Review: Maestro Conducts Sales...and Inventory" teaches customization of Web stores InfoWorld v. 21, n. 7, 2/15/99 (whole document). No Author, "iCat Commerce Online Opens...Free Store on the Internet" PR Newswire, 4/21/98 teaches a store builder and store free on the mall (whole document).

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
